

MATH3245 : Probability and Statistics for Science and Engineering

This course will develop a thorough understanding of the methods of probability and statistics which are used to model engineering problems and develop the necessary skills to implement and analyze basic statistical models using computer software. Intended for engineering majors.

Credits 3

Prerequisite Courses

MATH2520